FREE PLAYBOOK FOR REAL-ESTATE AND HOME-SERVICE SALES TEAMS

The Call Playbook

Cold calls, warm calls, and what to say back to the ten objections your team will hear this week. Every line is ready to copy, and ready to hand to a new rep on day one.

01 Before you dial

02 The cold call in five steps

03 Warm calls: the lead who reached out first

04 Ten objections and what to say

05 Voicemail and the follow-up texts

06 When the calls run themselves

divine-tech.ai

Aurora

Most calls are lost before the phone rings

People who freeze on calls usually skipped the prep. Ten minutes of setup makes the next hour easier.

- One goal per call. You are not selling a house or a furnace on this call. You are booking the next step: a showing, a price review, a visit. Everything you say should move toward that.
- A list of 20, not 200. Pick twenty people and write one reason to call each of them. "Your neighbor just sold" beats "I'm reaching out to homeowners in the area."
- Block the time. Same hour, same days, phone on, inbox closed. Try late afternoon and early evening, then keep what works for your area.
- Stand up and smile. It sounds silly. People hear it in your voice anyway.
- Count three numbers. Dials, conversations, booked meetings. After two weeks you will know which part to fix, instead of guessing. On a team, compare reps on the same three numbers and copy what the best one does.
- Have your calendar open. When someone says yes, give them two times on the spot. "Let me check and get back to you" is how warm leads go cold.

Five steps, about three minutes

1 Say who you are and why them, then give them an out

REAL ESTATE
"Hi Mark, it's Dana with Lakeside Realty. I sold a 3-bed two streets from you last month and had more buyers than homes. Did I catch you at a bad time?"

HOME SERVICES
"Hi, it's Tom from Northside Heating. We're doing furnace checks on your street this week before it gets cold. Did I catch you in the middle of something?"

Offering them an out sounds backwards. It lowers their guard, and most people say "no, go ahead."

2 Ask one question about them

REAL ESTATE
"If the right buyer showed up, would you think about selling in the next year, or are you staying put?"

HOME SERVICES
"When did someone last look at your furnace?"

3 Listen, then ask the follow-up

Whatever they say, ask one more: "What would make that worth it?" or "What happened last time?" Talk less than half the call. The second answer is where the real reason shows up.

4 Offer something small and specific

REAL ESTATE
"I can put together a ten-minute price review for your house. No visit needed. If the number is interesting, we talk."

HOME SERVICES
"Our tech is on your street Thursday anyway. Twenty minutes and you'll know if it makes it through winter."

5 Book it with two options

"Does Thursday at 10 or 3 work better?" Then text the confirmation while you are still on the line: "Just sent you a text with the time, so you have my number."

03 · WARM CALLS

The lead who reached out first

A form, a missed call, a message about a listing. This person already raised a hand, so the only real mistake is being slow. Call back while they are still thinking about it, ideally within minutes.

1 Open with what they asked about

REAL ESTATE

"Hi Sarah, it's Dana from Lakeside Realty. You asked about the house on Maple a few minutes ago. Is now OK for two quick questions?"

HOME SERVICES

"Hi, it's Tom from Northside Heating. You called about the heat not coming on. Is everyone OK? Let me ask two quick things."

2 Four questions, in this order

REAL ESTATE

What caught your eye about this one? When are you hoping to move? Have you talked to a lender yet? Who else is part of the decision?

HOME SERVICES

What's happening right now? How long has it been like that? What's the address? When is someone home?

3 Book before you hang up

"I can show it to you Saturday at 11 or Sunday at 2." / "I can have someone there tomorrow between 8 and 10." A warm lead with no booked time is a cold lead by Friday.

4 No answer? Voicemail and a text inside a minute

"Hi Sarah, it's Dana. Saw your question about Maple. I'll text you two times I can show it." Then send the text. Many people won't pick up an unknown number but will answer a text.

With Aurora, this page runs on its own. Your sales agent answers new leads by text or phone within seconds, any hour, asks these questions, and books the time straight into your calendar. You show up to the appointment.

04 · OBJECTIONS

Ten things they'll say, and what to say back

An objection usually means "I'm not sure yet." Ask what is behind it before you answer it.

"Just send me some info."

"Happy to. So I send the right thing, what would you want to see? Price, timing, or how it works?" Then: "I'll send it now and call Thursday to see what you thought."

"Not interested."

"Fair enough. Is it the timing, or do you already have it handled?" Half the time it's timing, and timing can be booked for later.

"Your price is too high."

"Too high compared to what?" Then walk through what's included, line by line. People rarely argue with a price they understand.

"I need to think about it."

"Of course. Usually that means price, timing, or whether we're the right fit. Which one is it for you?" Now you know what to answer.

"I already have an agent / a guy."

"Good, keep them. If they ever can't get there in time, I'd like to be your backup. Can I text you my number?"

"I got a cheaper quote."

"Could I see it? I'll go through it with you line by line." Often the cheaper quote leaves something out, and now you are the one who caught it.

"Call me later."

"Sure. Is Tuesday morning or Thursday afternoon better?" "Later" with no time on the calendar never happens.

"I have to talk to my wife / my partner."

"Makes sense, it's a big decision. Can we find fifteen minutes when you're both free? I'll answer their questions directly."

"How did you get my number?"

Tell the truth in one sentence: a public listing, a past job, a form they filled. Then go back to step 2.

"Now's a bad time." (market, season, money)

Real estate: "If the market moved, what number would make you look?" Home services: "That's exactly why people book now, before the first cold week."

05 · VOICEMAIL

Twenty seconds, one reason to call back

"Hi Mark, it's Dana from Lakeside Realty. I have a buyer looking on your street and wanted to ask you one question. My number is 555-0142, again 555-0142. I'll text you too."

Name, reason, number twice, and a text right after. Skip the long introduction. They'll look you up.

The other side of voicemail: when a customer calls you and you can't pick up, they hear yours. With Aurora, an agent answers that call instead, answers the question, and books the job while you finish the one you're on.

05 · FOLLOW-UP

The texts to send when they don't answer

Most deals close after several touches, and most people stop after one. Send these in order and stop as soon as they reply.

Day 0	"Hi Sarah, it's Dana from Lakeside Realty. Just tried you about the house on Maple. Would Saturday at 11 or Sunday at 2 work to see it?"
Day 1	"Quick one: the sellers are reviewing offers next week. Want me to hold a time for you?"
Day 3	"Found two more 3-beds near Maple that you might like better. Want the links?"
Day 7	"Still looking, or did you find a place? Either answer helps me."
Day 14	"I'll stop texting after this one. If you start looking again, I'm here. Good luck with the move."

Home services: same rhythm. Day 0 the quote, day 1 "any questions on the quote?", day 3 a photo of a similar job, day 7 "still want to get this done before winter?", day 14 the last message.

Aurora sends this whole sequence for you. The agent writes each text in your words, stops the moment the lead replies, books the time, and logs every message in your CRM, so nothing depends on someone remembering day 7.

06 · WHEN THE CALLS RUN THEMSELVES

Everything in this playbook can happen without you.

Aurora gives your business agents of its own. Each one has a colour and a job, works inside your phone, CRM and calendar, and asks you before it does anything that needs a person.

Warm leads

New leads get an answer in seconds, day or night, and a booked time on your calendar.

Follow-up

The day 1 to day 14 texts go out on time and stop the moment the lead replies.

Your CRM

Every call and message is logged, so the record is current before you get back to the car.

You decide

You set the rules and approve what matters from your phone. Every action is on record.

78% Last August, Spa Plus received 132,235 customer inquiries. 78% of them were handled by an Aurora agent and never needed a person.

See it run on your business

Book a demo at divine-tech.ai

Aurora

Follow @divinetech.ai for a new playbook every week.